TRADE TALKS UNCERTAIN. COULD FARM BILL BRING SOME RELIEF?

Audio with AFBF Economist Veronica Nigh

The Trump administration is continuing its efforts to negotiate a trade deal with China while simultaneously updating the North American Free Trade Agreement. American Farm Bureau Federation Economist Veronica Nigh says President Trump's move to cut a deal involving a Chinese company previously banned from exporting to the United States could bode well for agriculture...tape

House Speaker Paul Ryan has set a deadline of May 17 for the NAFTA renegotiations to conclude, just as the Farm Bill is expected to move to a vote. That would give time for the House of Representatives to vote on the treaty before the President's trade promotion authority expires on June 30. Nigh says the deadline places added pressure on the talks
